On this subject Celebrities. They make too much money but they have family too and some of the celebrities do drugs and our kids think that it is ok to do them too and they are making our kids to drive and they make too much money in my book and I all so understand they have family to support But that do give them the right to think they are better then any one else.

Celebrities they make too much money because they think they are better but you now what they are not better but I do understand that they need to make a living too and it is not right that they can pay their way out of jail. Poor can not do that and they do drugs that is what our kids want to do.

Score Point: 1

This response reflects fundamental deficiencies in persuasive writing skills. The writer seems to believe that celebrities make more money than they deserve. Two key ideas are presented to support this position (celebrities think they are better than other people and celebrities are poor role models). However, the writer's development of these ideas is often confusing, contradictory, and incoherent. In addition, there is no evidence of organization.
